Project Title: Baile Folklórico (https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Folk_dance_of_Mexico)

I'd like to build a multi-page site that covers different Mexican folk dances by region, like the Wikipedia structure. I think a clear navigation menu across the top or side would be good, although I am open to more creative navigations built into the page through images or maps. Baile folklórico is a joyous and colorful art, so I think the site should reflect that and avoid negative stereotypes about Mexican culture. Music is a big part of folklórico culture, so you may want to embed some of the traditional songs mentioned in the article. You may find that you need more images to support the text, but there should be plenty of text content to help you flesh out the page.

- Home Page/Introduction: Introduce baile folklórico and the diverse representations of the dance. I would recommend including the "History" content from Wikipedia here, though it could also be its own page. Set the stage for navigation to specific regions of Mexico.
- Diversity: The content here and in "History" is on the longer side, so you can trim it down some if needed as long as the evolution and breadth of the dances are captured. Focus on the diverse roots of baile folklórico. Special attention can be paid to the evolution of the dances from indigenous tradition.
- Central Mexico: Focus on dances that have more indigenous roots, as this region has more diversity in that regard.
- Northern Mexico: The content in this section is shorter, so there is room for more creative expression. To supplement the content here, I would recommend including photographs of folklórico de Nuevo Leon or Danza de Caballitos, which are not pictured.
- Southern Mexico: This section is also more brief. Feel free to beef it up with photos/music from other southern Mexican states like Yucatan or experiment with creative page designs.
- Western Mexico: This section is quite long, so you can trim down the Guerrero and Michoacan sections to focus on a few dances from each. I would like to keep the content as is for Jalisco and keep the Danza de los Viejitos from Michoacan.
- Sources: Use this page to cite sources, including the Wikipedia page, as well as other sources for photography, and any other credits that need to be provided.
